SALLY'S SALLY

pon the Memphis Public in the Person of Manager Mayer-The Rush for the Front Row of Seats Almost Equal to the Charge at Balaklava.

Some Funny Scenes at the Sale of Seats Yesterday and in the Queue the Night Before-Those Who Got Left Inclined to Kick at the Enterprise of Their Rivals.

the pen or wooden passageway to the theater box-office was formed at midnight on Tuesday, twenty-six citizens of all ages and colors formed in line and established the queue. They sat all the night long, and it was bitter cold, until the sale announced at 9 o'clock cold, until the sale announced at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. By daylight the line was extended far along the sidewalk to near Third street. Those who held the fort all night chiefly represented speculators in tickets, who wanted to bull the Bernhardt market by purchasing twelve seats for each night's per-formance at three dollars per seat, and sell them at advanced prices. The sums paid to the all-night watch ranged from five to ten dollars. The watchers were furnished with the necessary funds, and were given instructions what seats to purchase. The first twenty-six purchasers captured over 300 of the best seats, and paid for the same about $1000. The scene yesterday forenoon when the sale opened was indescribably amusing and absurd. The employers of the watchers kept the latter cupplied with whisky, cigars, to-bacco and food during the night. They had blankets and chairs also furnished, and made themselves as comfortable as possible. In the morning their employers were on hand to cheer them up and give them additional instructions. Several had dropped out of line during the night, being overcome by fatigue, weariness, or drunkenness. The speculators had the front men, and rejoiced over visions of large profits on sales of front-row dress-circle seats. The manner in which the sale was conducted was as follows: In the vestibule outside the box-office a large table was placed, and at which sat Messrs, J. Mayer, advance agent of the Bernhardt com-pany; next him sat Frank Gray, treasurer of the Theater, and next him another Theater employe. When the ticket-buyer was admitted from the pen outside the diagrams of seats were shown him and he selected what he wanted. Mr. Mayer marked off the seats on the diagram, and Frank Gray took the money and handed over the tickets. The THE MINUTE BOOK-Of the Ladies' Aid So-ciety of Second Presbyterian Church. The urchaser was then shown out by another door, and the next man in the queue, or pen, was admitted. The sale proceeded slowly so far as time was concerned, but the seats were sold rapidly in numbers. When the watcher got out of the Theater door he was at the tickets and divided them as arranged. The

Of course there were many desirable seats demands front seats, and pronounces them the dress-circle and parquette are good seats, family circle, above the dress-circle, and these cost only two dollars each. The demand for seats continued up to 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when it slacked ff and the box-office was closed. This ended the rush for choice seats, and now good seats can be secured without trouble. The managers made every effort to prevent speculators from making purchases. Under the rules announced any person in line and appearing at the box-office was entitled to purchase twelve seats—six in the front row and six in the second row of the dress-circle, making thirty-six seats for the three performances during the engagement. Yet even under this rule those presenting themselves were asked for whom they wanted the seats, and very many of those appearing presented writ-ten orders from business houses for thirty-six sents and a check for the amount, $108. In other cases, those applying presented written lists of names and numbers of seats desired.

Of course a few speculators got in and made purchases, but this was impossible to avoid on the part of the management. Yet no one secured a greater number of seats than the rules authorized for each performance, unless the speculators had two or more men in the queue, but this was something that could not e prevented legally or otherwise, it being couliarly a matter of enterprise, yet not ery philanthropic in its charcater, d probably censurable on ac-ount of its sordiness and selfishness. The sales of yesterday amount d to some $4000, and now that the rush is over the sales will be resumed at Kirkland's under the Peabody hotel at nine o'clock this morning. For Friday night's performance, Fron Fron, at least one-fifth of the seats in the dress circle and parquette remain unsold, and up-stairs in the family circle nearly all the seats re-main unsold. For Saturday matinee, when hmille will be the attraction, and Saturday night, when Advienne Lecourreur will be pre-sented, nearly one-half the seats down stairs are undisposed of.
